Show Surprises Unaware Private

Army Private First Class Rudy Amadeo, radar operator at the Palos Verdes Nike missile site, discovered the true beauty in art when he appeared this week on the Truth or Consequences television show in Hollywood.

Although no expert on art, Amadeo managed to identify John Singer Sargent's "The Daughters of the Honorable Percy Wyndham" and "The Enrollment" by illustrator Norman Rockwell from the lists read by Bob Barker.

When the curtains opened for the third time, revealing the last scene, carefully disguised Virginia was no more than 15 or 20 feet from her husband with only a large bonnet concealing her face.

After identifying Jean Francois Millet's "The Gleaners" (with a little help from emcee Bob Barker), Amadeo suddenly recognized Virginia and ran across the stage, meeting her in a tender embrace.

A few blushing moments on stage and the awarding of prizes followed. Then a dazed and very happy soldier took his wife off stage where a surprise three-day pass awaited.

Mrs. Amadeo was now waiting anxiously back stage while her unsuspecting husband was trying to identify the first two "paintings." She would appear in costume in the third presentation.

Unaware of secret plans afoot, PFC Amadeo consented to appear on the TV show, expecting to be the subject of some prank.

On the show emcee Bob Barker explained the young soldier's "consequence" was to correctly identify three "living paintings" staged by players from the Laguna Art Festival.

Unknown to PFC Amadeo, Truth or Consequences, in coordination with Army Public Information Offices, had contacted his wife, Virginia, who resides at 1220 W. 4th St., Wilmington, Delaware, are carefully planned a surprise reunion.

Arriving in Hollywood a few hours before the show,

Hot Weather Aids Anglers

Sportfisher skippers operating three boats off of Redondo Fisherman's Warf, Redondo Beach, anticipate warmer ocean waters will bring better top fishing for bonito, barracuda, sea bass and the elusive yellowtail.

That, anyway, is what history has shown to occur when mid-summer and hot spells boost water temperatures.

Fishing in the past week or so has given boats yields of bonito, sea bass, and barracuda, primarily, with a few yellowtail and halibut.

Last week found a Texan, E. F. Decker, from Odessa, nabbing the biggest bonito for the week, a 11-pounder on the half-day "City of Redondo."

A halibut weighing 18 pounds was the biggest of that specie, caught by Paul H. Webster, Panorama City. Bob Ritter, Manhattan Beach, nabbed the biggest yellowtail, 12 pounds, and C. M. Layman, Culver City, got the heaviest white sea bass, a 14-pounder. Barge fishing on the 300-foot-long "Sacramento," anchored three miles offshore Redondo, gave fishermen good offerings of mackerel and bonito, with sablefish, sole, halibut and a few barracuda in fish counts. Fishing on Redondo Fisherman's Warf found anglers pulling in halibut and bonito.
